By André C. Fontaine, Assistant in Modern Languages in Brooklyn Boys' High School, New York
272 pages, with vocabularies, illustrated, 90 cents

This new beginner's course is eminently adapted to the acquisition of a practical, well-grounded knowledge of simple written and spoken French.

The reading matter has been selected with the present-day pupil's needs and interests always in mind and includes a concise résumé of French history; a description of Parisian life and geography; and discussions of many social and economic features of France.

The grammar places special emphasis on the proper use of past tenses and on familiarity with the idiomatic expressions of everyday life.

GERMAN GRAMMAR

By Charles Harris, Professor of German, Western Reserve University

$1.00

A grammar for high school and college students who already have some acquaintance with German. It takes up first the inflection of the language, then its syntax, and lastly the formation and derivation of words. The standard of usage considered is good present-day prose. Important deviations in colloquial speech are mentioned. Illustrative examples from many sources are freely used. This new book will prove equally adapted for class study, for review and for reference.

ELEMENTARY GERMAN COMPOSITION

By F. W. Truscott and S. C. Smith, Professors in West Virginia University

50 Cents

The text contains only simple words in common use and frequently repeats them. In Part I the material is original, consisting of sentences and connected discourse which illustrate the use of the noun, the adjective and the verb. Part II consists of easy adaptations of familiar material from various sources. A chapter of Grammatical Notes gives the more important rules.
